When the meeting had been formally opened, Mayor Alexander presented his inaugural address, which was as follows:—

Napanee, Jan. 11th, 1915.

Gentlemen:—

We are met again to start the work of the Municipality for the year 1915. The ratepayers in their wisdom have seen fit to return all the old Council by acclamation, and I take it, that this is some evidence that the people are satisfied that you have during the past year endeavored to faithfully, honestly and intelligently acquit yourselves of the trust reposed in you severally and as a Council.

This year, you have re-arranged your several Standing Committees, and these Committees as now formed, should have an intelligent grasp of the work of the corporation to enable them to proceed at once with the business for the year as though there had been no interruption in our work.

During last year the Streets Committee performed an unusual amount of work in the construction of cement walks and also in the construction of permanent sewers on Robert Street and East Street. There are several cement walks that it will be necessary to construct this year and also the sewer on Bridge Street west. I would urge that whatever Local Improvement works are to be of the work of the corporation to enable them to proceed at once with the business for the year as though there had been no interruption in our work.

During last year the Streets Committee performed an unusual amount of work in the construction of cement walks and also in the construction of permanent sewers on Robert Street and East Street. There are several cement walks that it will be necessary to construct this year and also the sewer on Bridge Street west. I would urge that whatever Local Improvement works are to be undertaken this year be undertaken as soon as practicable so that if possible the assessment rolls for the same may be concluded during the financial year. The assessment rolls for the local improvement work of last year have not been finally completed, but I believe they will be ready at an early date. When this is done debentures will be required to be issued in order to retire the temporary loan to the bank. These debentures will be in the neighborhood of ten thousand dollars, and I trust we will be able to market them locally at satisfactory rates.

The Streets Committee will have considerable work upon our streets in the way of grading and cleaning and I recommend also that a systematic trimming of the trees on the highways be undertaken as in many places the excessive shade is injuring the highways. Possibly this work of trimming the trees can be undertaken advantageously at once while labor is more available and before the leaves come out. As far as the general works on the streets are concerned, we are now pretty well equipped with road machinery, as we have a heavy road roller, a scraper and a crusher, and they should be used, as it is a much better policy to wear them out than to let them rust out.

If our funds were more buoyant and the money market were more favorable I would recommend that a start be made upon permanent road building by paying a couple of

Little Change Has Occurred
Along the Western Front.

French in Alsace Are Face to Face
With a Large Force of German and Neither Side Claims Any Progress—Artillery Duels Are Going On in the North and Hard Fighting Is Reported Near Soissons

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Little change is observed on the western front. Alsace the French continue, by pinning and sporadic charges, their attempts to force their way nearer Rhine, but there has been snow in Vosges, and it is noticeable that their side claims any new progress. The Germans threw heavy reinforcements into Alsace after the recent French advance, and apparently they have been able to hold their ground in view of the failure of the French to consolidate the positions they took after much hard fighting.

With a comparative lull in the quarter and artillery duels predominating near the Belgian coast, fighting of a desperate character has broken out in the centre, notably to the northeast of Soissons, which is a fair, through bombardments, to infer the fate of Rheims, and further east, in the vicinity of Perthes Beausejour, from which points the allies have been trying to reach important railway to the north, seizure of which would cut one of German main arteries of communication.

The official communications of the contending nations do not agree as to the outcome of the recent fighting in these areas. The allies claim to have forged ahead from Soissons; the Germans say these attacks have not been fruitful, and that fighting is proceeding.

The allies contend that they have advanced north of Perthes and hold the ground at Beausejour, to the north and east. The Germans make no mention of fighting to the north of Perthes, but maintain that they have advanced east of the village. The fighting in the vicinity of Beausejour, which the allies consider so important, they ignore.

Last night's bulletin from French War Office said:

"There is no change in the situation to be chronicled."

The afternoon bulletin said:

"From the sea to the Lys, there was yesterday an intermittent and very intense cannonading. In the region of Ypres our artillery responded efficaciously to the artillery of the enemy, and sent well-placed shells against the German trenches."

"From the Lys to the Oise, in the region of Boisselle, our troops took possession of a trench of the enemy after a violent fight. To the northeast of Soissons, on 'Spur 132,' yesterday repulsed a German attack. Following this, they attacked and captured two lines of the enemy trenches captured Jan. 3, and assuming complete possession of 'Spur 132.'"

"On the Aisne and in Champagne as far as Rheims, there have been artillery exchanges. From Rheims the Argonne our artillery bombarded the first line trenches of the enemy and the shelters of the reserves. The north of Perthes, after having driven back the counter-attacks referred to in last night's communication, we made progress and gained yards of trenches."

SCORN FOR U. S.

Europe Contemptuous of Her Attitude in the War.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12. — The Daily News prints the following special Marconigram from Millward Price, its London, Eng., correspondent:

"Conversations with persons of Great Britain, France, Russia, Italy, Germany and Austria, compel the conviction that the United States is making no real friends in this war. On the contrary, it is impossible not to see that the American name is suffering, and that conceivably the Republic is laying up grave trouble for itself in the future.

"The general charge against our country is that we are displaying a shameless lack of idealism, chivalry, magnanimity and courage. Britons, Frenchmen, Russians and Italians blame Americans for ignoring the invasion of Belgium and the violations of the conventions of The Hague, and then springing into the international arena with a protest relating exclusively to matters of trade. The argument in these complaints is that if President Wilson had protested against the violations of treaties and the principles of civilized warfare he could have protested with vastly greater effect against the arbitrary and possibly indefensible interference with American cargoes.

"The indictment against us, so far as I can measure it, simply is this: we abdicated ignominiously and ran away when great questions of morals and humanity were concerned, but promptly recovered our sense of duty and our courage when the state of war threatened to reduce the profits of the copper kings and otherwise penalize America materially."

The writer goes on to say that Germans are equally scornful, accusing the U. S. of cringing to Britain and enduring its "arrogant control of the sea."

Easy Dusting.

Mrs. Florin had a new maid, and one morning as she entered the library she was somewhat surprised to find the girl seated in one of the chairs with her hands folded.

"What!" cried the mistress. "Here you are sitting down! Why, you were sent in here to dust the room!"

"Yes, ma'am," was the girl's reply, "but I've lost the duster, and so I am sitting on each of the chairs in turn."—Harper's Magazine.

To the north of Perthes, after having driven back the counter-attacks referred to in last night's communication, we made progress and gained 200 yards of trenches.

"To the north of Beausejour the enemy made a desperate effort to recapture the little fort which he had previously lost. His counter-attacks were delivered with energy. In each of them two battalions were engaged, the second advancing in close formation. Each attack was carried on with determination, but each was repulsed.

"In the Argonne there were some few small engagements, and our front was maintained. Between the Meuse and the Moselle the day passed calmly. In the Vosges there was a heavy fall of snow. Some shells fell in old Thann and on 'Hill 425'."

JEWIS IN THE ARMY.

Over Ten Thousand are Serving With the British Colors.

LONDON, Jan. 12. — More than 10,000 Jews are now serving in the British army and navy, and the army casualty lists show that six officers and over forty enlisted men have been killed and 150 reported wounded or missing in addition. These figures are compiled by Rev. Michael Adler, the senior Jewish chaplain to the forces. Rev. Mr. Adler has a son in the Royal Fusiliers, and he himself expects to leave for the front soon.

"Before the war," says the rabbi, "there were only 500 Jews in the service. Since the war, all sections of Jewry, rich and poor, have responded. Two of our men have received distinguished conduct medals. Among the Canadian troops are about 300 Jews, mostly sons of naturalized Russian and Roumanian Jews. Jewish soldiers are to be found also in all the training centres in England."

French Warship Is Sunk.

BERLIN, Jan. 12.—Vienna reports state that it has been ascertained that the French Dreadnought Courbet was hit by the Austrian submarine No. 12. The Courbet was rammed by her sister ship, the Jean Bart, which was attempting to tow her. The Courbet sank. The Jean Bart docked at Malta.

HOPE TO PIERCE LINE

Germans Confine Offensive to Narrow Zone Near Warsaw.

Despite Enormous Sacrifices of Men the Kaiser's Troops Have Failed to Make Any Appreciable Headway in Effort to Take Bolimow Forest—Austrians Are Hastily Changing Their Positions.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The Times' correspondent at Petrograd telegraphs: During the past week the offensive action of the German forces in Poland has been concentrated within a narrow zone, approximately some 30 miles west of Warsaw. The zone runs along the right bank of the Rawka river, between the hamlet of Mozeli, two miles south of Bolimow and Sucha, a village approximately equidistant from Bolimow and Sochazew.

Here the Germans hold two army corps, one of which is in reserve. The other is on the firing line. Here also they have placed in position a large number of heavy guns. The German trenches are on the easterly bank, and run approximately parallel with the course of the Rawka for a couple of miles. In some cases the German trench runs through one side of a village while the Russian trench runs through the other.

It is believed the Germans are straining every nerve to gain possession of the Bolimow woods. It would seem that they are hopeful of piercing the Russian lines if they can once establish themselves in these woods.

Very fierce fighting has been in progress since Monday last in the vicinity of Bolimow. Positions are frequently changing hands, but despite the enormous sacrifices of men and the almost unceasing bombardment the Germans have entirely failed to make any serious headway.

A wounded officer related how his regiment, which was holding the trenches in one of the Bolimow positions, had repulsed thirteen consecutive attacks in one night. The enemy came on in close columns, but was mowed down to a man.

After the tenth attack had thus been stopped bodies were piled so high that the Russian riflemen were unable to shoot, and men were sent out to heap the bodies in such a way as to form embankments for the machine guns. The three next attacks were repulsed from behind the shelter of the German bodies.

An unofficial dispatch from Petrograd says:

"On the Austrian front the enemy is attempting to execute great changes in his general position in view of the rapid and stalwart Russian advance through Bukovina."

The following official communication was issued last night from General Headquarters at Petrograd:

"On the left bank of the Vistula, both day and night on Jan. 10, the Germans attempted without success to attack our line at several points, but were repulsed everywhere by our fire."

"In an attack in the region of the village of Samioe, east of Skierniewice, the Germans reached our barbed wire entanglements and began to shout: 'Do not fire; we are yours.'"

"However, as similar stratagems had been employed before, the vigilance of our troops was not deceived by this manoeuvre of the Germans, and we directed against them a destructive fire and delivered a counter-attack, repulsing the enemy and inflicting heavy losses upon them."

OUR FLOUR FOR GERMANY?

Shipments From New York Said To Be Milled In Canada.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—That Canadian mills are supplying Germany and her allies with flour was asserted here yesterday, it being stated that a large portion of the cargo of steamships of the Scandinavian-American Line, plying between New York and Copenhagen, consists of Canadian flour shipped to the Scandinavian peninsula by the large mills in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The American mills in Minnesota also are shipping large quantities of flour to Copenhagen.

Since the beginning of the war the Scandinavian-American Line has increased its service until it has now running between ten and twelve boats a month, in contrast to the two steamships a month which formerly maintained trade relations between America and Scandinavian ports.

Besides flour, large quantities of coffee, cocoa and tea are shipped to Copenhagen. These are considered by the belligerents as contraband of war. But as the consignments are made to Scandinavian firms they cannot be seized unless it is proven that the shipments are destined for countries with which the allies are at war. Local officials of the Scandinavian-American Line admit that the exports from Copenhagen to the United States have almost doubled since the outbreak of the war. That Germany is still exporting large quantities of her home products is evidenced by the fact that 7,000 barrels of German beer arrived last week in Hoboken from Copenhagen via the Scandinavian Line.

ALL EYES ON EAST.

Entrance of Italy or Roumania or Change in Weather Is Awaited.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Only a change in the weather or the entrance into the war of Roumania or Italy or both is likely to bring any marked change in the military situation in Europe for some time to come.

What turn the weather will take no one can predict, but the belief is growing in those countries allied against Germany, Austria and Turkey that Roumania with her well-trained army of not less than 400,000 men, will at an early date throw herself into the conflict, which would in effect link Roumania with the extreme Russian left now forcing its way into Hungary through Bukovina.

Taking into consideration the Servians and Montenegrins, this would form a line menacing Austria-Hungary along the entire southeastern frontier from Russia to the Adriatic.

There is a strong feeling among the general public in France and England that definite action on the part of Italy and Roumania will not long be delayed.

DUNKIRK AGAIN BOMBED.

Two of the German Aviators Brought Down by Shrapnel.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—According to French despatches to the London papers fifty bombs were dropped on Dunkirk Sunday by aeroplanes which were cruising over the town from 11 o'clock yesterday morning until nearly four o'clock in the afternoon. They came from all directions, and were met by a heavy shrapnel fire. Two of the raiders were brought down, one outside the town and the other twenty miles away.

In spite of the long ordeal the populace displayed no panic. The bombs included some of the incen-complete possession of 'Spur 132.' 'On the Aisne and in Champagne, far as Rheims, there have been artillery exchanges. From Rheims to Argonne our artillery bombarded the first line trenches of the enemy and the shelters of the reserves. To the north of Perthes, after having given back the counter-attacks referred to in last night's communication, we made progress and gained 200 yards of trenches.

'To the north of Beausejour the enemy made a desperate effort to retake the little fort which he had previously lost. His counter-attacks were delivered with energy. In each of them two battalions were engaged, the second advancing in close formation. Each attack was carried on with determination, but each was resisted.

'In the Argonne there were some small engagements, and our position was maintained. Between the Meuse and the Moselle the day passed calmly. In the Vosges there was a heavy fall of snow. Some shells fell on Thann and on 'Hill 425.'

JEW IN THE ARMY.

Over Ten Thousand Are Serving With the British Colors.

LONDON, Jan. 12. — More than 10,000 Jews are now serving in the British army and navy, and the army authorities show that six officers and over forty enlisted men have been killed and 150 reported wounded missing in addition. These figures are compiled by Rev. Michael Heller, the senior Jewish chaplain to the forces. Rev. Mr. Adler has a son in the Royal Fusiliers, and he himself expects to leave for the front soon. "Before the war," says the rabbi, "there were only 500 Jews in the service. Since the war, all sections of rich, middle and poor, have responded. Two of our men have received distinguished conduct medals. Among Canadian troops are about 300 Jews, mostly sons of naturalized Russian and Roumanian Jews. Jewish soldiers are to be found also in all the training centres in England."

French Warship Is Sunk.

BERLIN, Jan. 12.—Vienna reports that it has been ascertained that the French Dreadnought Courbet is hit by the Austrian submarine U-12. The Courbet was rammed by her sister ship, the Jean Bart, which was attempting to tow her. The Courbet sank. The Jean Bart docked at Malta. The Courbet was of 23,467 tons displacement, and was armed with twelve 12-inch guns, twenty-two 5.12-inch guns and four 3-pounders. She was completed in 1913, and carried a complement of 904 men.

"In an attack in the region of the village of Samioe, east of Skierniewice, the Germans reached our barbed wire entanglements and began to shout: 'Do not fire; we are yours.'

"However, as similar stratagems had been employed before, the vigilance of our troops was not deceived by this manoeuvre of the Germans, and we directed against them a destructive fire and delivered a counter-attack, repulsing the enemy and inflicting heavy losses upon them.

KOENIGSBERG DESTROYED.

Bottled-Up German Cruiser Was Sunk Some Time Ago.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—A news agency despatch from London, published here yesterday afternoon, says:

The German cruiser Koenigsberg, which was bottled up in a river on the coast of Africa several weeks ago, has been sunk, according to a despatch received here from Southend yesterday. It quotes Capt. Willet, commander of one of the blockading vessels, as saying that the Koenigsberg was destroyed five days after she was bottled up, an aeroplane giving the range for a rain of shells upon the German boat.

The Koenigsberg was a third-class cruiser of 3,350 tons, built in 1907. She carried ten 4.1-inch guns and eight 2.1-inch guns. Her speed was 23.5 knots.

It is believed that the Nile sank after she was pulled off the reef near Iwajima. The vessel was on a voyage from London to Yokohama. She was in command of Capt. Powell.

Real War Begins In May.

LONDON, Jan. 12. — The British idea that operations up to the present are only preparatory to big events fits in with a bit of gossip now heard here. It is to the effect that Lord Kitchener, when asked concerning probable duration of the war, said: "I don't know when it will end, but I do know when it will begin, and that is in the month of May."

The opinion is expressed in some quarters, however, that the inauguration of more general movements will be on an earlier date than is generally expressed, although persons in close touch with the army believe that the real crisis will not be reached until summer.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—According to French despatches to the London papers fifty bombs were dropped on Dunkirk Sunday by aeroplanes which were cruising over the town from 11 o'clock yesterday morning until nearly four o'clock in the afternoon. They came from all directions, and were met by a heavy shrapnel fire. Two of the raiders were brought down, one outside the town and the other twenty miles away.

In spite of the long ordeal the populace displayed no panic. The bombs included some of the incendiary type, but little material damage was done. Six persons were killed at Dunkirk and the suburb of Malo, and it is reported that several persons were killed at St. Pol and Adinkerke, but this has not been confirmed. It appears that the absence of a large number of French aeroplanes from Dunkirk must have been known to the Germans.

Protect the House Wren.

The rich, bubbling song of the house wren is one of the sweetest sounds in country life. It behooves the farmer's boy to provide wren boxes, the entrances to which are about an inch in diameter, nailing these in the gables of barns and outhouses and orchard trees. Grasshoppers, beetles, caterpillars, bugs and spiders are the bird's principal items of food, but cut-worms, weevils, ticks and plant lice are eaten in large quantities.

THE "TURCOS"?

French Colonial Troops Are Full Blooded Arabs Officered by Whites.

The announcement that, in a heroic charge, a battalion of Turcos was almost wiped out, seems to have puzzled not a few people, who apparently think they are an Oriental corps which in some mysterious way has been mobilized to assist the allies. The confusion arises from the fact that "Turcos" is a slang name for the Tirailleurs, one of the best of the French colonial forces. The Tirailleurs, indeed, are a corps of sharpshooters, who have been practically trained from boyhood to fight. The greater proportion of the Turcos are Arabs of pure blood, though the officers and non-commissioned officers are mostly French. Excluding the French element, all the Turcos are Mohammedan, and death has no terrors for them. To die in war is for them to enter the Mussulman Paradise.

In years gone by they fought amongst themselves, tribe against tribe, and at one time, used their swords against the French. Ultimately they became French subjects, and are now only too glad to have a go at the enemies of France. The Turcos are born fighters, possessing extraordinary powers of endurance, for they have been brought up to "rough it" from infancy. Furthermore, as Mr. C. W. Randle points out, they are accustomed to living on next to nothing.

The Turco's staple diet is boiled semolina, seasoned with some simple sauce and sometimes eaten with vegetables. A little mutton or goat-flesh is occasionally added, but the semolina is the mainstay. Few soldiers carry such a weight on their shoulders as the Turcos. Their knapsacks weigh from some 80 to 100 pounds, for, in addition to his own kit, each man carries some portion of the camp equipment. Then there is, of course, the rifle.

With their black, straight hair, surmounted by a red fez, and their black beards, and wearing a sort of blouse or loose tunic with baggy Moorish trousers, strong boots of a greyish leather, and cloth anklebands, they make one of the most picturesque corps at present engaged in the war.

demand from foreign buyers for Mani-bushels were made. The demand for oats on export account is steady and sales of 50,000 bushels were made to London at 31s, an advance of 6d per quarter.

The local trade in coarse grains is quiet, but the tone of the market is firm. The export trade in flour was slow and the Justice of the Day of Vengeance—

"Render Unto Her Double"—The

"The Controversy of Zion"—The counts With Debtors.

Jan. 3.—Pastor
Russell's discourse inquired
into the reason why in God's providence the world is ushering into
"a Time of Trouble such as was
not since there was a nation."
(Daniel 12:1.)
His text was,
"The nations were angry, and Thy wrath is come."
Revelation 11:18.

After introductory remarks upon his text, the speaker read Isaiah 34:
1-8; Jeremiah 25:15, 16, 27-38; Isaiah
66:15, 16; Luke 21:24-26; Revelation
6:9-11; 2 Thessalonians 1:3-10.
Their united testimony, he claimed,
referred to the present time—mis-translated the end of the world; properly interpreted, the end of the Age, inaugurating the New Age—"the world to come." God's people Israel typified Spiritual Israel. All others were called the nations, the people, Gentiles, and were outside covenant relationship with God. If we recognize saintly people of all denominations as the true Church, and all others as Gentiles, we shall get into alignment with the Divine mind.
From this viewpoint alone can Biblical prophecies be understood.

The Divine rod is to be expected upon the so-called Christian kingdoms—nominal Christians. Responsibility and punishment will be proportional to failure to live up to knowledge possessed. God's wrath and the coming judgments are wholly different from the unscriptural creedal legends respecting eternal torture for all except the Elect.

Elsewhere God shows us that the troubles of the Day of Wrath are the outgrowth of human wrong-doing, and that these dire penalties for sin would have wrecked our social and religious fabric long ago, had He not held back the storm of human passion until the end of this Age. Just so soon as that storm shall have taught humanity needed lessons and liquidated long-standing accounts, Messiah's Kingdom, with a clean slate, will be inaugurated.

We have reached the end of the world—end of this Age, the Pastor declared. Then he explained that, although God had provided, through

ORIGIN OF THE CURFEW.

The Cover Fire Bell Was Rung Way Back in King Alfred's Time.

What is the curfew? Its etymology carries its history with it. The word comes from the French couvre-feu (cover fire), a bell tolled at evening as a signal to the inhabitants to cover fires, extinguish lights and retire to rest. It is erroneously said to have been instituted in England by William the Conqueror as an arbitrary bit of tyranny, and the nursery historian has waxed sentimental over the wrongs of the conquered Saxon, and conjured up pictures that must be balm to the downtrodden Celt. Even Thomson tells us:

The shivering wretches at the curfew
sound

Dejected sunk into their sordid beds.

But the couvre-feu was known before William's time, both in England and on the continent. He did, indeed, issue an edict on the subject, and although this edict may incidentally have helped to put down the Saxon beer clubs, which were hotbeds of political conspiracies, its primary aim was as a precaution against fire. That danger was an ever present one in those days of chimneyless wooden houses.

don at 31s, an advance of 6d per quarter. The local trade in coarse grains is quiet, but the trade in flour was slow and the local demand is also quiet, but the undertone of the market is firm. A fair trade continues to be done in millfeed. Butter was firm, cheese quiet, eggs active.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Jan. 11.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.31¼; No. 1 northern, $1.30¼; No. 2 do., $1.27¼; May, $1.32¼.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 2228 cattle, 1486 hogs, 585 sheep and lambs and 103 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice, heavy steers, $8 to $8.15, and one lot of five Christmas quality, $8.75; good, $7.75 to $8.15; medium, $6.50 to $6.70; choice cows, $6.50 to $7; good cows, $6 to $6.50; medium, $5 to $5.50; canners, $3.75 to $4; cutters, $4.25 to $4.50; bulls, $5 to $7.

Stockers and Feeders.

There was very little done on the stocker and feeder market, and prices were reported unchanged. Feeders, $6 to $6.50; stockers at $4.75 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate number of milkers and springers were offered, and sold at $50 to $87 each, the bulk going at between $60 and $75.

Veal Calves.

The calf market was slightly firmer. Choice veals sold at $10 to $10.50; good at $9 to $9.50; medium, $7 to $8; common, $5 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $3.50 to $6; heavy ewes, $4.50 to $4.75; cull sheep, $2.50 to $3; lambs, light, $8.25 to $9.75; heavy lambs, $7.50 to $7.75.

Hogs.

The market for hogs was about steady. Selects fed and watered, $7.65 to $7.75, and $7.20 f.o.b. cars, and $7.90 to $8 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the feature of today's trade was the stronger feeling for steers, and prices scored an advance of 25c per cwt., as compared with last week. There was no change in the market for butchers' cows and bulls, prices being unchanged. The supply of this class of stock was ample to fill all requirements. A fairly active trade was done at prices which were more satisfactory to drovers. Sales of full loads of choice steers were made at $8 to $8.25, and good steers brought $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt.

Owing to the increased offerings of sheep and lambs the market showed a decline today of 25c per cwt. The demand for supplies even at this reduction was only fair, as buyers seemed to have ample stocks on hand for the present and trade was rather slow. Ontario lambs sold at $7.75 to $8, and Quebec at $7.25 to $7.50 per cwt.

Hogs advanced 15c per 100 pounds. Offerings were larger but as there was a keen demand from packers an active trade was done in selected lots at $8.25 to $8.40, sows $6.25 to $6.40, and stags $4.20 to $4.25 per cwt., weighed off cars.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., Jan. 11.—Cattle—Receipts, 4000; fairly active; prime steers, $8.75 to $9; shipping, $8 to $8.65; butchers, $6 to $8.25; heifers, $5.50 to $7.75; cows, $3.75 to $6.75; bulls, $4.50 to $7.

Hogs—Receipts, 22,000; active; heavy steady; heavy, $7; mixed, $7 to $7.10; yorkers, $7.15 to $7.35; pigs, $7.30 to $7.35; roughs, $6.15 to $6.25; stags, $5 to $6.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 16,000; active; lambs, $5 to $9; yearlings, $5 to $7.50; wethers, $6.25 to $6.50; ewes, $3.50 to $6; sheep, mixed, $5.75 to $6.

Small dose. Small bottle. Best since 1870.

Jesus' sacrifice, for absolute forgiveness of all sins and frailties traceable to original sin, and that certain wifal sins have been more or less punished during the lives of the sinners, nevertheless this will not be a full settlement for sin. Persecution of the Body of Christ is a crime against God, and a Divine curse has rested upon their persecutors, whose responsibility has been proportionate to knowledge.

The great trouble closing the Jewish Age was retribution for unsettled claims of Justice. (Luke 11:50, 51.) The generation then living had far greater responsibility than had those preceding them. They had a great Light, shining from Jesus and the early saints. In their mistreatment of these light-bearers they virtually acquitted their forefathers who had done similarly with much less light.

The Bible intimates that similar aggregations of punishments are due in the end of this Gospel Age. The Time of Trouble, the Day of Wrath, will be "the recompenses for Zion's controversy." As Jesus foretold, the Kingdom class have suffered violence, while outwardly the violent have posed as the True Church. The sins of these persecutors must be liquidated, although eventually the persecutors will be forgiven. The Time of Trouble now beginning will be the squaring of God's accounts.

According to Scripture, the closing of this Gospel Age will witness the martyrdom of the last members of the Body of Christ. In our day a more refined process of persecution obtains. Some are gibbeted by the pulpit; some are roasted in the press; some have their tongues cut out in that their words are misrepresented, and they are denied a hearing. Yet the Scriptures seem to imply a literal destruction also.

Babylon—what is known as "the Christian world"—will be punished for these crimes against God's saints. "Christendom" of to-day corresponds exactly to the Jewry of Jesus' day. Misnaming-itself "Christ's Kingdom," it is intent upon the preservation of the great Babylon which it has constructed, willing to do anything to avoid the destruction which the Bible declares.

Hypocrisy the Greatest of All Sins.

Time was when men really thought that kings ruled as part of Christ's Kingdom, that human destiny was in the hands of the clergy, that the non-elect were doomed to eternal torture. But that day has passed. No longer deceived, the clergy know that Sheol and Hades represent the death state, and not fire or torture in any sense. They see God's charactr clearly; they perceive that the kingdoms of this world are merely political institutions. Nevertheless, the Divine character is still blasphemed; God is still misrepresented to the people.

Two hundred thousand professed ministers of Christ stand before the world to-day, telling legends of the Dark Ages and hindering people from a knowledge of the Truth. Does not such hypocrisy, such blasphemy against God, such deception of the people, deserve great punishment, and is it not nigh—even at the door?

That danger was an ever present one in those days of chimneyless wooden houses.

The ancient city ordinances of London abound in stringent fire regulations. None of them, however, was more effective than the "cover fire" bell, which as far back as the time of King Alfred was rung in certain places in England. William's edict rendered compulsory an ancient custom. But it was a wise legislative act and not a bit of arbitrary tyranny. We find plenty of early traces of the custom or its equivalent, as, for instance, the blowing of a horn at the market place in continental Europe.

WORLDS OF THE UNIVERSE.

All Might Be Annihilated and Not Affect the Solar Systems.

I am asked, "Are distant stars which shine by their own light visible only, or are worlds like our earth visible by reflected light?"

Go out to Neptune, our own last local world in our modest solar system; turn around, look back this way; then you must have a large telescope to see the earth. Only the sun of all bodies in our solar system is visible from space deeps. And it looks like the point of the finest sewing needle from stellar distances.

Thus from space depths only suns at terrific heat are visible in any telescope, even the largest that can be made. Then all worlds are invisible and unknown. The earth and man are both totally unknown to people on worlds revolving around any of the hundreds of millions of other suns, if there are such worlds and inhabitants.

Imagine that there are 1,000,000,000 suns, each surrounded by eight worlds like those revolving now around our sun. Then if an accident suddenly annihilated the 8,000,000,000 worlds, people and all, the accident could not even be noticed. The suns would all move on with velocities in between four and eighty miles per second precisely as if there had been no accident. Thus if there are intelligences in the depths of the sidereal universe they have not heard of man nor his infinitesimal world—the earth.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

A Ten Years' Penance.

It is happily seldom that the revenge of a disappointed husband takes quite such an extreme form as in the case of the man whose will ran thus: "When I remember that the only happy times I ever enjoyed were when my wife sulked with me, and when I remember that my married life might, for this reason, be considered to have been a fairly happy one because she was nearly always sulking, I am constrained to forget the repulsion the contemplation of her face inspired me with and leave her the sum of £60,000 on condition that she undertakes to pass two hours a day at my graveside for the ten years following my decease, in company with her sister, whom I have reason to know she loathes worse than she does myself."—London Tit-Bits.

Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross Work

Through the Daughters of the Empire.

REPORT OF WORK.

At the first work-meeting held in the New Year, which was very largely attended, a most interesting and satisfactory report was given of the work already accomplished by the Daughters of the Empire in Napanee, and the above committee since the beginning of the war. The work has gone out in many directions, and the showing was a good one.

Attention was drawn to the fact that the first work for the war done in this town and county was inaugurated by the Daughters of the Empire, in the establishment in this locality, of the Hospital Ship Fund, which was generously responded to.

Emphasis was also laid upon the assertion that in the numerous and very liberal donations of which this Committee has been the beneficiary, all were voluntary offerings, no solicitation whatever, having been employed.

Satisfaction was felt by the members that the financial standing is excellent.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

The Committee has much pleasure in acknowledging with great appreciation the work done for us by Mrs. Stover of Violet, a lady of 85 years of age, who has very kindly knitted several pairs of socks, to be transmitted to the soldiers, through this Committee. Mrs. Stover is good enough to keep on knitting for us.

The above acknowledgements are repeated in the case of our kind workers at Bath, who have just sent us in, through the kindness of Mrs. McTear and Mrs. Hamm, a fine parcel of comforts. The names of the workers are as follows: Mrs. Rowse 1 muffler, Miss Driscoll 1 muffler, Mrs. McTear 2 pr. socks, Mrs. J. Young 1 pr. socks, Mrs. Thos. Bain 1 pr. socks, Mrs. Max Robinson 1 pr. socks, Mrs. A. McLaugherty 3 pr. wristlets. A donation from Mrs. L. J. Switzer of 1 pr. of socks.

Our work-meetings are held every Thursday afternoon, when tea is served, and a cordial welcome is extended to our friends. The Committee-room is open for the present, also on Saturday afternoons from 2 to 5 o'clock.

I. Co., 2nd. Batt., 1st. Brig.
Bustard Camp,
Salisbury Plain,
1st Overseas Can. Contingent.
Dec. 17th, 1914.

Dear Mrs. Pybus:—Mother wrote me and put me in mind of my promise to write to you. Really I had forgotten all about it, as we have quite a lot of drilling. I am sure you will excuse me if I don't do it again, won't you. Well, I find this country pretty nice, but it is awfully wet this time of the year. We are all under canvas, but don't mind that. You see we can get used to almost anything, if we only think so. It is not cold and there is no snow, or any signs of any here. I have been up to London and found it very nice, but the buildings and other surroundings are very much older than you would see in Canada or the United States. It is indeed quite a sight, but you can't see London very well from the buildings. Would you be so kind as to send me Harry's address. I heard he had gone to the United States, also that Jim Ferguson has gone over there since I left. Also heard he had gone to Kingston, so did not write to him. Excuse short letter, as I have to go to bed, last post sounding.

Yours respectfully,
Pte. Stanley York,

Get after the lice on your cattle and poultry. Our new "Anti-Louse" powder is guaranteed to do the work. It is not poisonous, and has a pleasant odor in the stable. 25 cents per pound at the Medical Hall—Fred L. Hooper.

FREAKS IN BASEBALL.

Apparently Clever Plays May Sometimes Be Pure Luck.

Freak plays make baseball humorous, if not interesting. Some of these plays are said to be the result of quick thinking; but, as a matter of fact, most of them are simply luck.

Curious things happen. A ball fell into a tin can, and, it being impossible to get it out in time, can and all were thrown to the basemen. Another ball hit the end of a nail driven through the opposite side of a fence and could not be got down until all the runners scored.

A swift hit glances off the pitcher's hand, is snapped up by an infielder and thrown to first, putting the man out.

Red hot liners or grounders sometimes hit the first or third base bag and glance away for singles or even two baggers.

The shortest two bagger known was when the ball grazed the bat, shot up a few feet and fell in front of the plate. As the catcher reached for the twirling ball it glanced from his glove and bounded back to the stand, and the batter made second easily.

A center fielder saw a mit in the way of the shortstop and walked about sixty feet in to move it out of the way when he heard the crack of the bat and saw a hot ball coming straight at him. He could do nothing but try to catch it and did to his surprise. But he was given credit by the crowd for being a great student of batters.—Arthur Macdonald in American Physical Education Review.

ONTARIO POLITICS

CONSERVATIVE OPINIONS OF FERGUSON AND MCGARRY, THE NEW CABINET MINISTERS.

PROUDFOOT INQUIRY 1913.

Toronto Telegram, Conservative, May 1st, 1913.—The Proudfoot enquiry was a travesty on justice and fair play. Objections from Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., struck the keynote of the procedure at the enquiry into the Proudfoot charges. That they note dominated the rulings of Howard Ferguson, M.P.P., and the critics of T. W. McGarry, M.P.P. Toronto World, Conservative, May 1913.—The Government may be criticized for appointing such a rabid partisan as Mr. Ferguson as Chairman of the Committee and the Liberals may take all they can of the limitations imposed on the enquiry by the Chairman.

The Kingston Standard, Conservative, said that the incident left a bad taste in the mouth.

The Toronto Telegram, on May 1st, said the Liberals in the Committee are tied hand and foot by Chairman Ferguson's rulings.

Toronto Telegram, May 3, 1913.—Among the events decided at the orse show was not the following best appointed and most complete white-washing waggon driven by the winner—first prize, G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P.

Toronto Telegram, May 3, 1913.—Anglo Saxondom recognizes three great and impartial tribunals, the judicial committee of the privy council, the United States Supreme Court and G. Howard Ferguson's Privileges and Elections Committee.

Toronto Telegram, May 5, 1913.—The Ontario Privileges and Elections committee is as impartial, upright and unprejudiced a body of jurists as ever cut a throat or scuttled a ship.

SNIDER INVESTIGATION, 1914.

Toronto Telegram, April 16, 1914.—Ovalty to party requires G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P., to officiate as a tailor to himself. The Proudfoot inquiry was throttled by the strong armed chairmanship of G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P. The same authority being operated as a curb on the activity of the Public Accounts Committee, (in the Snider investigations).

FERGUSON DISQUALIFICATION CASE, 1914.

Toronto World, Conservative.—here are a lot of people in Ontario ordering why Mr. G. Howard Ferguson is so indispensable to the Government that special legislation has to be passed to save his political life.

W. C. T. U. ITEMS.

SALISBURY CANTEN CLOSED.

London, Jan. 6.—An order was issued on Sunday closing the beer canteen at Salisbury till further notice. The Ontario S. S. Association is making a great effort to secure 10,000 pledges by October 1915, and urges W.C.T.U. workers to co-operate with them in educating the children and young people in the principles of total abstinence and prohibition.

The Provincial Supt. of Medal Contests requests that each union send at least one selection suitable for the new book. She writes:—"The more promptly your selections are forwarded the sooner will the book be accomplished fact," and urges at least one contest be held by each union. The annual reports are to hand and blocks of Main street, but in view of the present conditions we will hardly be able to undertake this improvement this year. However, I would like to bear the matter in mind and endeavor to have all sewer connections made as soon as practicable in order that when the time comes to pave any of our streets, we will not be met with the objection that they will be all torn up by sewer excavations.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee may offer for consideration the extension of the Water Works System, as some parts of the town are in need of water service, both for fire protection and for sewerage.

Some repairs should be made to the Town Hall and the seating capacity increased. The Town Property Committee also should examine the Sewage Disposal Works from time to time to see that the works are kept in proper order and that the sludge well is emptied from time to time.

The Finance Committee will have a task in keeping our rate within bounds as the school rate promises to be high and our uncontrollable expenditure, including the provision for retiring maturing debentures, is very large leaving comparatively small margin for the Committees to spend on controllable items of expenditure.

Last year a grant of $500.00 was made to the County Patriotic Fund and a considerable balance of this grant will have to be paid out of this year's taxes. This is an extraordinary expenditure and I feel that all citizens and ratepayers heartily endorse the action taken.

Labor conditions should be good during the coming year as we do not appear to have been effected very adversely by the existing war conditions and considerable labor will be required in the completion of the drill hall. It seems also that it might be a good opportunity for builders to erect a few dwellings of moderate size, as I do not believe that there are any available houses for rent at present.

The question of the Canada Northern Railway station and the present railway time table of this road also should be considered.

Our labors in the Council last year were very harmonious and as the personnel is the same, we should again be able to work in peace and harmony, for the profit of the citizens and with honor and credit to yourselves, and finally allow me to congratulate you on being returned to the Council unopposed.

Yours, etc.,

A. ALEXANDER.

Mayor.

Coun. Walters entered and took his seat.

SMUGGLERS OF LETTERS CHARGE A HIGH PRICE

Aardenburg, Netherlands, Dec. 21.—Since the beginning of the war it has been difficult to get uncensored letters through to Holland from Belgium, but the difficulty has increased a thousandfold in the last few weeks. Smugglers and poachers who know every nook of the border are generally the persons to whom is intrusted the dangerous task. These men charge anything from 2 francs to 25 francs for getting a letter through, and in most cases they succeed in their undertaking. Occasionally, however, one of them gets shot, and then the price of mail carrier is put up by the rest of his trade.

Some persons prefer to intrust their letters to friends crossing the frontier on business. Some of these letters are entirely innocent productions apprising relatives of the well-being of the writers, so the friends often are quite willing to take the risk, yet they resort to the strangest stratagems to elude the prying German pickets at the frontier.

NERVOUS AS THEY NEAR BORDER

The other day, on a tramway line which I must not name, but on which cars run at titful intervals between Holland and Belgium, a small company of travelers from Belgium was huddled around the stove that had long since ceased to give any warmth. Some of the men showed signs of increasing nervousness as the Dutch border was approached.

United by a common danger and undeterred by the fear of a possible spy among them, they began to confide their apprehensions to one another. One of the men said that this was his twentieth time crossing the frontier with letters.

"I have never yet been caught," he said. "You just watch me and you will understand how it was. And nineteen times I have succeeded in getting back to Belgium as a returned refugee. No questions asked and glad to get the fugitives back," you know, that is the German attitude. But three times now I have met the same official at the border, so I fear he is beginning to know me as a 'chronic' returning refugee, so I shall have to wander farther afield in Holland before I venture back into Belgium by quite a new

PATRIOTISM AND PRODUCTION

THE DUTY AND THE OPPORTUNITY OF CANADIAN FARMERS.

The first Agricultural Conference will be held in the lecture room of the Winter Fair Building, Ottawa, on Wednesday, January 20th, at 1.30 o'clock. The conference will be presided over by Hon. Jas. Duff, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, and will be addressed by the Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture for Canada. The discussion will be led by Duncan Anderson, Orillia, Ont., and Robt. Miller, Stouffville, Ont.

The conference is held under the direction of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, and is the first of a series which are being arranged for throughout Canada, to explain and discuss conditions in countries where live stock and agricultural production will be affected by the war.

Much valuable information has been collected, with the view of presenting to farmers and business men the necessity of extending our agricultural production, in order, through the development of our own resources, to take advantage of the opportunity of establishing an extensive export trade and, at the same time, to discharge our duty to the Empire by providing a more adequate supply of food stuffs for the sustenance of its army and its people. Farmers are urged to be present in large numbers to participate in this conference. It is their privilege as citizens of this Dominion to render a very effective service to the Mother Country during the coming year. What is to be done and how to do it will be fully discussed at the Ottawa meeting.

Bread Famine Drives Belgians to Rioting

Amsterdam, Jan. 11.—(Via London, 12.11 a.m.)—A despatch to The Telegraph from Brussels says: "A bread riot has occurred at Marcinelle, Province of Hainaut, Belgium. A crowd collected around the town hall and smashed its windows. The police restored order with some difficulty, and later bread was supplied to the populace."

"The German army is suffering from typhus and pneumonia."

Roumania Soon To Join in War

Paris, Jan. 10.—G. L. Diamandy, deputy in the Roumanian parliament, and member of the Franco-Roumanian mission, now in France, declared at a banquet Saturday night that Roumania was now on the eve of great developments, and that it was sure to win, "because we are sure of the justice of our cause." He said he was sure that Roumania's entry into the war would result in its end. He added that he did not speak officially but that he voiced the sentiment of his people generally.

London and Kent Expect Air Raid by German

London, Jan. 11.—A German raid upon the Kentish coast is possibly upon London is anticipated within the next few days, or as so as the weather is favorable. There has been during the past week German aerial activity over Northern France. Twelve aeroplanes appeared over Dunkirk on Saturday. One Zeppelin and three aeroplanes appeared over Calais the same day. Sixteen aeroplanes attempted to cross the Channel yesterday, but turned back owing to weather conditions. The weather to-day is cold, cloudy but moderate. We had a storm during the night. There was much aerial activity on our side yesterday. Extra precautions are being taken on the Kentish shore where aircraft were searching.

Large Cruiser Von Der Tann Reported Sunk

Buenos Ayres, Jan. 10.—La Prensa publishes the report that an engagement has taken place off Rio Grande do Norte, Brazil, between the British battle cruiser Invincible and the German battle cruiser Von der Tann, adding that the Von der Tann has been sunk.

The German battle cruiser Von der Tann was reported several weeks ago to have crossed the Atlantic to join the other German warships in the South Atlantic and Pacific. Her arrival in these waters has never been recorded.

The Von der Tann is of 18,000 ton displacement, 562 feet in length, speed of 27.6 knots. She carries a complement of 910 men and an armament of eight 11-inch guns, ten 5.9 guns, 16 24-pounders and four torpedo tubes.

The British battle cruiser Invincible is of 17,250 tons displacement, with a complement of 731 men. Her armament includes eight 12-inch guns, ten 6-inch guns, 16 24-pounders and four torpedo tubes.

BETRAYS HIDING PLACE.

Another man kept feeling nervously at his leg every now and then and the first speaker warned him.

"I should advise you not to do that," he cautioned. "You are giving the whole show away. I bet you have a letter there concealed in your stocking."

The other sheepishly admitted that he had.

"Now," cried No. 1 triumphantly,
"I'll tell you a safe way of fooling
the Germans. Hand me your letter."

The letter was duly fished out of the stocking. No. 1 took it, rolled it into a tight wad and stuck it into the stove, then he took the poker and poked it right up into the middle among the cinders. Remember the stove was cold, so there was no danger of the letter getting burned.

"Now, try not to look at the stove," advised the resourceful one.

A moment later the train stopped and a German sentinel looked in and commanded everyone to come into the guardhouse. The sergeant in command began to examine each individual in turn. Even those whose conscience were white as snow felt a tremor. One never could know what these Germans would consider suspect.

PRETENDS HE CANNOT UNDER- STAND.

Each man in turn was searched most thoroughly. When the turn of the resourceful one came he pretended not to understand a word of German, and to be terribly afraid. Even an interpreter failed to elicit anything except incoherent protestations from him.

"Oh, that creature is a hopeless imbecile," impatiently exclaimed the commander. "Let's get on to the next one." The imbecile was allowed to return to the train where he encroached himself in the least uncomfortable corner. Nothing was found on any of the passengers, and, much relieved and all talking at once, they got into the train again.

Once safe on the Dutch side of the frontier the resourceful one began poking the stove vigorously until he recovered the letter, only slightly blackened by its stay among the cinders. Then he poked some more until his own bundle of papers came out. Another passenger, who had remained silent, congratulated him on his ruse, and, with a wink, tapped his coat pocket.

"You, too, carried letters?" inquired the talkative one. "Are they in your coat?"

"Not in the one I was wearing in the guardhouse," was the reply, "but in the pocket of the other, which had dropped under the seat, and which I forgot to take with me when I left the car."

Germans Evacuate Lille

London, Jan. 11.—A despatch to The Daily Express from Boulogne asserts that confirmation has been obtained of the rumors that the Germans have evacuated Lille, and that the city is now virtually in the possession of the British.

ment of his people generally.

Canadians Feeding The Enemy Flour?

New York, Jan. 11.—That Canadian mills are supplying Germany and her allies with flour was asserted here to-day, it being stated that a large portion of the cargo of steamers of the Scandinavian-American Line, plying between New York and Copenhagen, consists of Canadian flour shipped to the Scandinavian peninsula by the large mills in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The American mills in Minnesota also are shipping large quantities of flour to Copenhagen.

Since the beginning of the war the Scandinavian-American Line has increased its service until it has now running between ten and twelve boats a month, in contrast to the two steamships a month which formerly maintained trade relations between America and Scandinavian ports.

ALL IS CONTRABAND.

Besides flour large quantities of coffee, cocoa and tea are shipped to Copenhagen. These are considered by the belligerents as contraband of war.
But as the consignments are made to Scandinavian firms they cannot be seized unless it is proven that the shipments are destined for countries with which the allies are at war.
Local officials of the Scandinavian-American Line admit that the exports from Copenhagen to the United States have almost doubled since the outbreak of the war. That Germany is still exporting large quantities of her home products is evidenced by the fact that 7,000 barrels of German

WOMAN IN HISTORY.

She Appears to Have Got Herself on a Good Many Pages.

Some advocates of equal suffrage and feminine progress seem to think that woman has not been given her proper place and due credit in history.

And yet, don't you know, we had not observed the historic discrimination against woman! On the contrary, the place of woman in history has looked pretty good to us.

What about Joan of Arc? And Charlotte Corday? And Rebecca the Jewess? Anything namby pamby in them?
Who said Martha Washington and Florence Nightingale? Then there are —don't let everybody speak at once—
Ruth and Rachel and Potiphar's wife, not to mention Lot's.

You bet Caudle had no contempt for Mrs. Caudle, nor Mantalini for the madame.

We need not go so far back as Cleopatra and Aspasia except to remark that in their day they cut a rather wide swath around Alexandria and Athens, and appear no small bunch of radishes on both the dramatic stage and the historic page. Moll Pitcher was a bummer in American history and Sal Jennings a loller in English history; Meg Merrilles was no slouch. Does Catharine of Russia count for nothing, nor Maria Theresa of Austria, nor Elizabeth and Victoria of Britain, among feminine sovereigns?

Gracious, here come trooping in at the door, their bright eyes shining and their rosy cheeks glowing, Jessie Brown of Lucknow and Jennie Deans of Midlothian, and Ethel Newcome and Lucy Fountain and Florence Dombey.
God bless their sweet souls, each and every one!—Louisville Courier Journal.

Tann was reported several weeks to have crossed the Atlantic to the val in these waters has never recorded.

The Von der Tann is of 18,000 displacement, 562 feet in length speed of 27.6 knots. She carries complement of 910 men and armament of eight 11-inch guns,
5.9 guns, 16 24-pounders and 1

The British battle cruiser Invincible is of 17,250 tons displacement, a complement of 731 men. Her arment includes eight 12-inch guns,

Terrible Cost in Men and Money of Five Months of War

At the end of 1914 foreign statisticians computed that five months of the greatest war of history had cost the nations involved 6,000,000 men (killed, wounded and captured) and $7,000,000,000. These figures are subdivided as follows:

LOSSES.

Great Britain—800 officers killed, 4,000 wounded; men, 15,000 killed, 60,000 wounded, 25,000 missing.
 France—Total casualties, 1,100,000, of whom 180,000 have been killed.
 Russia—Total casualties, 1,800,000, of whom 250,000 have been killed.
 Belgium—30,000 killed, 68,000 wounded, 35,000 captured.
 Serbia—Total casualties, 170,000; said by Austria to have been captured, 80,000.
 Germany—400,000 killed, 1,250,000 wounded, 400,000 missing.
 Austria—Total casualties, 1,500,000, of whom 200,000 have been killed.

EXPENSE.

Great Britain—$225,000,000 a month, or $1,225,000,000 at the end of the year.
 France—$300,000,000 a month, a total of $1,500,000,000.
 Russia—$350,000,000 a month, a total of $1,750,000,000.
 Germany—$300,000,000 a month, a total of $1,500,000,000 at home, in addition to paying the expenses of her ally, Turkey.
 Austria—Estimated to total $1,000,000,000.
 In addition, all the warring nations are said to have lost perhaps as much as they have spent by the paralyzation of commerce and industry.

Hugo Loubeque stood a little apart from the eager passengers gathered at the rail watching the giant harbor of the Golden Gate creeping about them, encircling them.

To others the sight meant home, but to Loubeque it meant bitterness, gall. It meant the country that had been his, but which had cast him forth an unworthy son unfit to be its citizen. His eyes fastened morosely upon the slender, pretty slip of a girl clinging to the rail, her lips parted as she watched the dock, black with eager friends and relatives, coming closer, closer.

Then a slow crunching as the great ship swung into her moorings. Hugo Loubeque slowly lifted the cigar from his mouth and waved it in a deliberate circle that ended with its tip pointing toward the slender girl. He caught her eyes and smiled at the expression of terror, of fear in them, as he saw she had marked his gesture.

Came a crowding forward in the center of the throng upon the deck. The gangplank thrust its nose out, out, until it rested upon the dock. Some of the passengers looked about in surprise at sound of a guttural oath. They saw a tall, somber, saturnine passenger smoking a cigar, his eyes fastened upon a squad of bluecoated policemen edging their way from the rear of the throng into the exact center. They wondered.

Lucille tripped down the gangplank. Once more the man who had uttered the oath lifted his cigar. Came a quick upheaval in the throng. The spy smiled to himself, then moved toward the plank. He looked down upon the crowd of men surrounding the slip of a girl, surrounding her so closely she was hidden from sight. The policemen were fighting their way to the ship. Came a scream in a woman's voice. Loubeque bent forward his knuckles showing a blue whiteness from the fierceness of his grip upon the flue's rail.

"Help, help! Cap!"

The officers whirled in the direction of the girl's voice. The crowd of men jammed closer, resisting, without the appearance of resistance, the shoulders of the law. From outside the jam darted a woman clad in deep mourning. Easily the throng of men gave way before her. Her arms were about the neck of the girl who had screamed, smothering her lips with kisses.

"My poor, dear sister!" she sobbed uncontrollably, her arms about Lucille's waist, bearing her through the crowd of men.

lons, sick with apprehension of what was to come, a dull apathy gradually closing about her and soothing her tired eyes. After all, she had known that Hugo Loubeque would be able to do as he said.

The car leaped like a living thing through the streets of the city and then doubled upon its tracks so that she might have no chance to place certain sites and gain some idea thereby what her ultimate destination was. Lucille studied her captor from under cover of her heavy lashes. She could see but little of the face for the heavy mourning veil swathing it. She only made out that she appeared apathetic, disinterested, now her portion of the work assigned to her had been carried through. It seemed a characteristic attitude of all who worked for the man. They were but cogs in a vast machine, responsive to the master's touch.

Only at the end of their drive, when the chauffeur opened the door, did the woman speak.

"Any attempt to escape would be quite useless," she said in a dull, mechanical tone of voice. "If you are wise you will not make the situation any more difficult for yourself by being foolish."

As the motorcar ceased purring at the curb, the woman pressed the door bell. Came a scuffling along the hall, a shadow fluttered there a second, then the door swung open. Lucille stepped across the threshold with her captor, surprised to see no one in sight. Apparently the door had opened of its own volition. Before her was a straight stairway, appearing to end at the second flight. To her left was a living room into which she was ushered. Again the woman pressed a bell.

"You will want some tea and cakes," she said quietly.

Lucille turned at a suggestive clink of china. She had heard no one enter the room, yet, in the shadows, she saw an attentive butler holding the tea tray while the mysterious veiled woman poured. The man moved toward her, moved silently, swiftly, surely. There was something about his manner, his perfection, strikingly reminiscent of some one she had seen before.

"Thompson!" she gasped. "Thompson! You here! What are you doing here?"

"Yes, Miss Love! Thank you! I am employed by Mr. Loubeque, Miss Love! Thank you!"

And then gradually she understood, knew who had stolen the papers from pausing before her to peer narrowly into her face, as though impressing her every feature indelibly upon their minds. When she regained her powers of observation the line had passed, had paused and disappeared. She looked about her.

She was alone.

CHAPTER XV.

Correspondence Under Difficulties.

TWO days and never a sign more of Loubeque. Lucille had feared and dreaded that first meeting.

The room assigned her was to all outward seeming a daintily furnished bedchamber; but, trying the large windows, she found they only could be let down from the top and were there covered by a thin netting of a metal that resisted every attempt at prying apart. Looking more carefully, she saw this same filament of wire was interwoven with the glass so they could not be completely smashed. The only means of escape lay by the door, and to get out that way involved a flight of steps which passed many rooms.

But she must escape. The thought of what Loubeque might be doing unimpeded drove her brain tyrannically against a worn out body. She had the man's diary, wherein was evidence against him of such crimes as would have appalled the most hardened courts, would have set nations at one another's throats, entailed countless deaths. The thing was so deadly that, zealous though she was in her object of saving her sweetheart, Lucille knew she could never bring herself to the point of making public such a document. She had the rubies from the throat of the hideous idol in the subterranean cave. Times without number she regarded the glowing stones, shuddered at the blood red rays that mocked her from each facet, imagining the heart of each to have borrowed some of its luster from the rivers of blood that had been shed through the lure of its mocking light.

Apparently she was free to come and go about the place as she pleased, but the very mockery of such a freedom made her real situation all the more. Absorbed in the hopeless task of finding some means of escape she took to having her meals served in her room, eating scarcely anything, so engrossed was she with her thoughts.

On the fourth day, as she sat beside the window, dejectedly looking out upon the well nigh deserted street, she was suddenly aware of a shadow falling upon the glass. She sprang to her feet, turned to face Loubeque. The spy was not smiling now. Instead there was a tender expression on his face, a look of sympathy. In his hands he held a newspaper and instantly she divined it held something that would hurt her. She nodded slowly, catching her breath with an effort, fighting back her nameless terror.

"Lucille"—The spy's eyes fell before the fear in the steady ones that met his own. "Lucille, you are too young yet to know that in the completion of any great work always there are those who must suffer." He stopped, evidently finding it hard to continue.

"I would not harm you, Lucille; would not cause you one moment's grief or misery, physical or mental, for anything in the world. But I would allow not even the—yes, the love I bear you because of your likeness to your mother to stand in the way of destroy-

For a moment Lucille hesitated. She must break the window pane. Swift she took a slipper from her foot, drew back and brought the tiny heel crashing against the glass. At the sound of smashing glass she heard a rustle without her door. The captain looked up at her, and simultaneously a flipped the round missile toward him watched him eagerly as he stooped, picked it up and then thrust it hurriedly in his pocket, passing on. She saw Thompson, the butler, slip hurriedly out of the door and take after him. Then a slight creaking, as of rust hinges, and she stared about her in mute horror. She was moving down and walls were advancing forward. She was moving down and the room was moving with her.

Came a little groan, a tremor running through the walls of the room. Looking up she could see solid steel walls passing into place where the room she was in had been. Merely a cage—an elevator had been the boiler where she was a captive. The machinery stopped working abruptly. She peered over the edge of the room for she was merely standing on a flat surface so far as one side was concerned. To her ears came the insistent ringing of a bell. A huddled, black mass showed almost beneath her. Crouching upon the floor she leaned over and gingerly groped at it with her fingers, drawing them sharply back as they encountered human flesh.

For just a second she faltered before investigating her discovery. Loubeque must have come from her room in this fashion. It might be that in some way Loubeque had fallen and injured the machinery. To stoop down, take the papers from his pocket and hide them between the crack of the floor of the room and the bottom of the elevator was the work of an instant.

As the room glided gently into place without so much as a tremor she leaned down and lifted the groaning man head to her lap. She had come barefoot in time, for the spy was struggling feebly to get to his feet. He smiled ruefully as he lighted a match and scanned the features of his companion. For a second he appeared dazed, the swift consternation crossed his face as his hand shot toward the place where he had placed the stolen papers.

"Come," he said quietly, his tone silky, yet dry and cold and harsh. "Come, young lady. Of course you understand the papers will be found, and this is merely delaying the inevitable."

He did not wait for her to speak, merely touched her arm and assisted her to the platform. He stirred slightly. Came the whirl of machinery, a most immediately shut out. Once more the room was in motion, going upward this time. She closed her eyes instinctively before the mystery of all. When she opened them once more she was in the place she had left. Everything was as it had been save for a broken window pane and the presence of Loubeque.

He regarded her narrowly, still smoking silently. He opened his lips as though to speak, then closed them sharply and stepped to the door, listening a moment, then ringing a bell which was almost immediately answered by the butler and the woman who had first captured the girl.

Hurriedly Thompson explained what had happened—the pebble wrapped in a strip of white paper which the man outside had picked up, the manner in which he had mysteriously disappeared.

The officers who were whirled in the direction of the girl's voice. The crowd of men jammed closer, resisting, without the appearance of resistance, the shoulders of the law. From outside the jam darted a woman clad in deep mourning. Easily the throng of men gave way before her. Her arms were about the neck of the girl who had screamed, smothering her lips with kisses.

"My poor, dear sister!" she sobbed uncontrollably, her arms about Lucille's waist, bearing her through the crowd of men.

The captain stood at Loubeque's elbow, his face troubled. The policemen fought their way to the center of the group to find no woman there. Their leader, a sergeant, stepped toward the captain.

"You sent a wireless, sir, regarding a young woman?"

The captain turned to Loubeque, his eyes threatening.

"The girl," he demanded. "What has become of?"

Hugo Loubeque lazily pointed his cigar toward a black, high powered motorcar leaping out into the city's street.

"The insane girl?" he smiled. "I believe I saw her step into that machine, captain."

The sergeant waited curiously. Knowing there was something between the two men, scenting the atmosphere of hatred, he waited.

"No use now, sergeant," sighed Lucille's friend.

Something told Lucille as she stood at the ship's rail that trouble awaited her once her feet were set upon the wharf. And her hand closed about the diary hidden in the bosom of her dress, the diary she had read so many times she knew it well nigh by heart, the diary with its tale of gigantic power and unscrupulousness in the accomplishment of one purpose, the destruction of her father. What chance did the honest, simple minded captain have, what chance did the officers of a mere municipality have when they opposed themselves to one who overthrew nations and their rulers by the lifting of his hand?

Her steps were haggard as she marched down the plank. Almost immediately she felt a pressing forward in the fore ranks of the crowd, a pressing forward that tended in her direction. She looked about her and found a man's face staring into hers from every direction. There was no enmity on those faces. They were not brutal, not even evil. But there was a fixed purposefulness about them, a grim regard of her that told her instinctively they were the minions of Hugo Loubeque. Yet not a hand was laid upon her, not a voice lifted. She tried to force her way forward, but a steady resistance met her. Then just as a heavily veiled woman pressed toward her, with eyes that glittered a menace matching poorly the affectionate pose of her form, Lucille lifted her voice only to have her appeal smothered by the fierce embrace of the woman, who continually referred to Lucille as "her poor sister."

She did not know how it was worked, but the crowd of men opened readily for the escort and herself—not only opened, but assisted them along their way. The door of a great limousine stood open before her. Swiftly she was hustled into the car, and before her companion had closed the door the car shot forward, gaining speed with every rod.

The futility of further resistance made her sink back against the cushwhile the mysterious veiled woman poured. The man moved toward her, moved silently, swiftly, surely. There was something about his manner, his perfection, strikingly reminiscent of some one she had seen before.

"Thompson!" she gasped. "Thompson! You here! What are you doing here?"

"Yes, Miss Love! Thank you! I am employed by Mr. Loubeque, Miss Love! Thank you!"

And then gradually she understood, knew who had stolen the papers from her father's safe, realized how completely they had all been fooled by this cunning servant.

"Go away!" she muttered brokenly. "Go away! I can't bear to look at you!"

"Yes, miss. Thank you!"

When she looked up he had disappeared.

Swiftly she gathered herself together. Such childish tricks must not be permitted to shatter her courage for even an instant. She slipped stealthily to the door through which she had entered the house. In the hall she looked cautiously about, then put her foot upon the stairs and proceeded to move to the first flight. Midway, she was paralyzed into inactivity by finding the stairs to be in motion.

Horror seized her. Then once more she braced herself. Only another trick of Loubeque's it was. The stairs seemed to fold up within themselves like a miniature escalator. They grew steady once more, and the girl looked about an unfurnished room of stone walls. But she did not see these walls, did not mark the lack of decorations or furniture in the room, for a company of men formed a crescent facing her, one tall figure—that of Loubeque—standing apart from the rest, immovable, silent.

The solitary figure lifted his hand. Then, frozen with terror though she was, Lucille saw that each figure was swathed in a black robe and that a plain silk mask of black covered every face. Masks through which threatening eyes glared out upon her, masks so light they flattened against the wearers' features with hideous significance. Slowly the company passed her, fore the fear in the steady ones that met his own. "Lucille, you are too young yet to know that in the completion of any great work always there are those who must suffer." He stopped, evidently finding it hard to continue.

"I would not harm you, Lucille; would not cause you one moment's grief or misery, physical or mental, for anything in the world. But I would allow not even the—yes, the love I bear you because of your likeness to your mother to stand in the way of destroying you utterly should you attempt to get in my path. And so I am very happy today—very happy for myself, while I am at the same time very unhappy because of your distress. I know you cannot understand my feeling. I only wish you to know that you have stolen the fruits, the sweets of my victory."

"Victory?" She whispered the word aloud.

Silently he put the newspaper in her outstretched hand. She took it numbly, staring at the black, leaded type heading the column, staring at the familiar, the beloved name of her sweetheart there. When she looked up Hugo Loubeque was gone, had disappeared. But that did not matter to her now. The nature of his disappearance did not even impress her. Nothing mattered. The spy's victory was approaching completion.

Lucille looked about her wildly. She beat her tiny fists against the window, then stopped at the utter futility of it. She looked down, and her eyes stared wide into those of a pedestrian upon the sidewalk. It was the captain of the ship who had been her friend. She waved her hand, knowing from his expression that he recognized her, that he had been hunting her. He made a motion as of writing, and she nodded swiftly, then darted toward the little dressing table.

And there she sat, dumb with misery. In the delight of seeing a friend's face at the psychological moment, when her despair, her misery, her desperation, was at its height, she had not thought a simple thing like a pencil, a pen, ink, paper, might be necessary. In despair Lucille looked about her. Paper she had. She tore the blank strip off the top of the newspaper page, tore it so that the headline regarding Lieutenant Gibson appeared beneath it. She stared helplessly in the mirror, her teeth fastened viciously in her lower lip, so viciously that when she withdrew them a tiny drop of red blood appeared upon the delicate skin. If only she had a pencil or pen, something to write with—

The blood drop fell upon the paper, carmining it. Lucille gasped delightedly. Her hand seized a pin from the writing table and dabbed at the blot. It had dried up. Nervening herself she lightly jabbed the pin into the ball of her thumb, feverishly writing upon the blank paper. How painful it was! How swiftly the blood dried! But she must—she must—

"Prisoner of Loubeque—Here—Help—Read head!"

She swayed slightly. She could endure the torture no longer. It was sufficient. He could piece together what he read, what she had told him aboard the ship. But how to reach him with the fragmentary strip of paper? Tearing the necklace from about her throat she detached a jewel swiftly and wrapped the strip of paper about it. In one leap she had reached the window. The captain was still there.

presence of Loubeque.

He regarded her narrowly, a smoking silently. He opened his lips as though to speak, then closed them sharply and stepped to the door, listening a moment, then ringing a bell which was almost immediately answered by the butler and the woman who had first captured the girl.

Hurriedly Thompson explained what had happened—the pebble wrapped in a strip of white paper which the man outside had picked up, the manner which he had mysteriously disappeared, eluding the butler's pursuit, the mission of policemen to the house, the throwing of the spring that lowered the girl's room to the basement.

"And he got out of the way, et Loubeque frowned thoughtfully, then laughed a dry, barking laugh as he turned to the girl. "And with all that luck working for you, Miss Lucille, you see now how impossible it is to escape. Now I shall leave you alone to reflect upon the advisability of storing the packet to me. Until then you will not be disturbed even by my servant. You may recall, my child, that thirst is a very unpleasant torture."

He closed the door behind him very softly. Not a sound came from within. Hunger, thirst, solitude—all this in this prison, this prison so much like a prison that it was rendered on the more hideous thereby. And even though outsiders knew she was being detained here they could not find her, could not even secure adequate evidence that she was here did they make an examination. She hung herself upon the bed, burying her face in her hands and giving way to sobs.

She straightened, startled by a faint tinkle against the window pane. Swiftly she approached the window. Upon the street no one was in sight. She looked up and espied the face of the captain peering cautiously from over the brick wall above her.

Feverishly she ripped at the netting which had been within the glass. It tore she broke it. Carefully she drew the glass inside and laid it upon the floor. The netting gave slightly. She tore her hands opening the space upon she could get her shoulders through. Slowly, round and round, she worked the opening. It was finally wide enough. She looked up. The captain nodded briefly, then disappeared.

In a moment he reappeared, slow dangling a heavy rope from which he had made a looped chair. Lucille edged her way slowly through the opening. She stood upon the beam sill outside, hanging to the netting with one hand while she reached for the rope with the other. The second time her fingers closed about it. Swiftly she tucked it about her skirts, then drew taut. Her feet swung clear of the ledge. Then she felt herself being slowly lifted, lifted in little spasmodic jerks.

Her finger tips brushed the roof. Another pull and she had a firm hold and was drawing herself over. Powerful hands closed about her wrists, who from below came a shout that told she had been discovered.

With an oath the captain yanked her to the roof, jerked her there so violently she toppled and fell against his straightened and caught his arm to support herself.

From beneath them came sounds of pursuit, hurrying footsteps upon stair loud voices. Lucille seemed to have all the initiative now. She grasped the man's arm and hurried him toward the closest chimney just as a sk-

For a moment Lucille hesitated. She must break the window pane. Swiftly he took a slipper from her foot, drew back and brought the tiny heel crashing against the glass. At the sound of smashing glass she heard a rustling without her door. The captain looked up at her, and simultaneously she slipped the round missile toward him, watched him eagerly as he stooped to pick it up and then thrust it hurriedly in his pocket, passing on. She saw Thompson, the butler, slip hurriedly out of the door and take after him. Then a slight creaking, as of rusty hinges, and she stared about her in mute horror. She was moving down and walls were advancing forward. He was moving down and the room was moving with her.

Came a little groan, a tremor running through the walls of the room. Looking up she could see solid steel rails passing into place where the room she was in had been. Merely a cage—an elevator and been the boudoir where she was a captive. The machinery stopped working abruptly. He peered over the edge of the room, and she was merely standing on a flat surface so far as one side was concerned. To her ears came the insistent ringing of a bell. A huddled, black mass showed almost beneath her, crouching upon the floor she leaned over and gingerly groped at it with her fingers, drawing them sharply back as they encountered human flesh.

For just a second she faltered before investigating her discovery. Loubeque must have come from her room in this fashion. It might be that in some way Loubeque had fallen and injured the machinery. To stoop down, take the papers from his pocket and hide them between the crack of the floor of the room and the bottom of the elevator was the work of an instant.

As the room glided gently into place without so much as a tremor she leaped down and lifted the groaning man's head to her lap. She had come barely a time, for the spy was struggling feebly to get to his feet. He smiled wearily as he lighted a match and scanned the features of his companion. "or a second he appeared dazed, then swift consternation crossed his face as he hand shot toward the place where he had placed the stolen papers.

"Come," he said quietly, his tones silky, yet dry and cold and hard, come, young lady. Of course you understand the papers will be found, and this is merely delaying the inevitable." He did not wait for her to speak, merely touched her arm and assisted her to the platform. He stirred slightly. Came the whirl of machinery, almost immediately shut out. Once more the room was in motion, going toward this time. She closed her eyes instinctively before the mystery of it all. When she opened them once more he was in the place she had left. Everything was as it had been save for a broken window pane and the presence of Loubeque.

He regarded her narrowly, still making silently. He opened his lips as though to speak, then closed them sharply and stepped to the door, listening a moment, then ringing a bell, which was almost immediately answered by the butler and the woman who had first captured the girl.

Hurriedly Thompson explained what had happened—the pebble wrapped in a piece of white paper which the man outside had picked up, the manner in which he had mysteriously disappeared.

light door swung open where they had stood.

He drew a revolver and held it steadily pointing toward the place. A chip of plaster crackled at their feet. Lucille looked down at a flattened lead bullet. Yet there had been no shot fired. She stared incredulously at the man.

"A silencer—Maxim silencer," he whispered.

She nodded understanding. Together they crept in the shadow of the chimney toward the thin brick dividing wall, the sanded roof scratching their hands terribly. Again that flutter of chips. The captain turned and fairly hurled a shot from his revolver at the figures so cautiously approaching. A cry of pain followed the report and in the confusion, the pair made a short rush.

The pursuit grew bold now. Rose the voice of Loubeque, cold, steady, terrible.

"Don't waste shots. Get the man with lead. Catch the girl."

The captain's grip tightened reassuringly on her wrist.

"If they get me," he said quietly, "take the gun and make them work."

In the excitement he became separated from Lucille. She looked about, then uttered a cry of warning. He took a step backward, then instinctively lifted his elbow as though to avert a bullet. The movement overbalanced him and he disappeared over the edge, a groping, tumbling thing.

From every direction came the pursuit. Lucille suddenly noticed there was no attempt made to close in upon her, but that she was being driven in a certain direction. A bullet dashed a spray of sand into her face, and she darted aside—darted into a yawning blackness.

When she opened her eyes she was surprised to find that there had been no fall worth mentioning, that she had merely been driven toward a trap door and caught as she toppled down. Loubeque was watching her, a curiously twisted smile playing about the corners of his mouth.

"You have too many friends, Lucille," he said.

"Yes," he murmured, after a moment's silence, "you are altogether too too slippery, too nerve racking a prisoner. I think, while the search for the packet is going on it would save wear and tear on our constitutions to move you to my ranch—my ranch in Mexico. A beautiful spot," he smiled. "I trust you will enjoy it as much as I have."

Lucille looked at him steadily. In the eyes of both glowed an indomitable purpose, a hard resolve, a mutual admiration. Loubeque smiled once more, this time grimly.

"Honors have been too even till now. I fancy the ranch will settle the rubber satisfactorily—at any rate, satisfactorily to me."

As Thompson, the butler-thief, swiftly descended to the ground floor and out into the court and knelt over the body of the man who had fallen from the roof top, his hands fluttered over the man like tiny, white birds. Through the pockets he went, rifling them completely and replacing those things which would be of no value to him. He stopped as he unwrapped the note Lucille had written on the scrap of paper and bound about the ruby.

Incredulity, avarice and puzzled delight fought for mastery upon his face, in his eyes. Secreting the ruby in his pocket, he carefully lifted his burden

AN INDIAN MARATHON.

Remarkable Speed and Endurance of a Noted Mohave Runner.

In the early days of Ehrenberg, Ariz., a man was frightfully burned by kerosene. There was no physician and no drug store in the town, and so a noted Mohave runner who lived near by was hastily engaged to run to Fort Yuma, a government post directly across the Colorado river from the present town of Yuma.

The distance from Ehrenberg to Fort Yuma, as the crow flies, is sixty miles. By the shortest trail that the Indian could take it was at least seventy-five miles, and he had to swim the river once each way. The Indian was to get $10 for the trip and $10 additional if he returned in twenty-four hours. He prepared quickly for the undertaking and disappeared down the trail.

Within twenty-four hours he was back in Ehrenberg, bringing with him the packages of medicine for which he had been sent. Each package bore the labels of the Yuma dispensary. There was no living being along the trail between the two places from whom he could have obtained any assistance whatever. That Indian ran 150 miles in less than twenty-four hours over a barren, stony desert, interspersed with deep, dry gulches and ravines, in and out of which he was forced to pass.

Victimized by Changing Times.
"Now, then, Cousin Emma, let me give you a bit off the breast."

THE DETECTIVE CAMERA.

It Will Reveal a Forged Signature Where Microscopes Fail.

The camera has been frequently instrumental in the detection of criminals. In case of forgery photography is invaluable, for there is no forger in the world clever enough to baffle its detective skill. An interesting proof of this was provided a few years ago in the case of a forged will. An enlarged photograph revealed the pencilled lines over which the signatures of the testator and witnesses had been written, although no trace of them was visible through the microscope.

This is one of the peculiarities of the camera, that it brings to light marks which are invisible through a microscope, just as it has been known to reveal the signs of measles and smallpox several days before they became visible to the naked eye.

Where a forged signature is suspected the method adopted is to take photographs of the genuine and supposed false signatures, magnify each a hundredfold or more and compare the results. Under this careful test the slightest discrepancy becomes exaggerated out of close resemblance to the signature, and every sign of hesitancy—for few forgers can write a counterfeit signature with perfect ease and fluency—stands revealed.

A forged banknote, however minutely and faithfully the original may have been copied, cannot deceive the eye of the camera, which will show not only the slightest deviation from the genuine note, but also any difference in the texture of the paper used. In a recent case, where a section of a check had been removed and another piece in the form of pulp substituted with infinite skill, the camera revealed the fraud at once, showing exactly where the new and old paper were joined.—London Standard.

Scientific Farming*ORCHARD COVER CROPS.

Rye, Vetch or Bur Clover Will Conserve and Build Soil Fertility.

An orchard cover crop should be sown at once if it has not already been, says the Home and Farmstead. To neglect this is to fail to do one's duty to the orchard. When the green crop is turned under in the spring it will contribute organic matter to the soil, a thing so much needed by many soils. It will improve the moisture holding content of the soil and result in releasing a greater amount of the soil's plant food to the growing trees.

If it is a clay soil it is close and water percolates down through it quite slowly. In fact, much of the water runs off the slopes where much of the clay lands of America exists and does not get down to the tree roots as it would if it were a cultivated orchard and especially if cover crops have been turned under.

If it is a sandy soil where the orchard exists the cover crop will improve the texture of the soil, add to its water holding capacity and check the leach of the soil fertility.

Rye, vetch, bur clover or other of the usual winter cover crops will add materially to orchard profits if they are given a chance to conserve and build soil fertility in the orchard tract.

CROSSING ALFALFA.

Experiments That Promise to Improve the Plant For Grazing Purposes.

Alfalfa is such a well known forage crop that little has been done to improve it by scientific breeding. But alfalfa has several serious defects. It is not well adapted to grazing, and it does not produce seed freely.

William Southworth of Ontario Agricultural college, Guelph, Canada, has been making some experiments that promise greatly to improve alfalfa in these respects. He picked out as the plant most likely to fulfill the conditions, the common yellow trefoil, known as black medick (Medicago lupulina).

RADIO-ACTIVE MANURES.

Their Use Not Recommended as Field Fertilizers.

The specialists of the bureau of soils, United States department of agriculture, who have been investigating the use of radio-active substances as fertilizers, report that, while the use of concentrated radium ores or extracted radium in certain quantities in pot experiments seem to stimulate plant growth or to retard it in greater concentration, the quantity of radium present in the amount of so called radioactive manure ordinarily recommended for application to an acre is not great enough to produce any appreciable effect on field crops. The radioactive manure consists of ground uranium radium ores of too low grade to be used for the extraction of radium or of ores from which uranium has been removed. The amount of radium generally present in such of these materials as have been placed on the market has been found to be so small that in the quantity ordinarily recommended for application to an acre there is less radium than is actually already present on an average in an acre foot of soil.

The specialists point out that all ores which contain radium also contain a very much larger proportion of another radioactive element called uranium. The latter is ordinarily recognized as a plant poison, being very injurious to plants when above a certain concentration, but when present in very small quantity it acts as a stimulant to plant growth; other metals, like copper and lead, act in the same way. These effects of uranium are entirely different from those of other radio-active elements of the same radio-activity. It is therefore concluded that the results obtained with uranium are not due to its property of radioactivity, but to its chemical properties, and that the conflicting results obtained with radioactive manure from different sources are to be explained by the presence or absence of uranium and possibly of other constituents of a non-radioactive nature. Until further knowledge is gained with regard to the way in which plant poisons, like uranium, affect the growth of plants the soil specialists are inclined to advise against the use of radio-active manures or any other material containing uranium as a fertilizer in general farming.

The Plant for Grazing Purposes.
Alfalfa is such a well known forage crop that little has been done to improve it by scientific breeding. But alfalfa has several serious defects. It is not well adapted to grazing, and it does not produce seed freely.

William Southworth of Ontario Agricultural college, Guelph, Canada, has been making some experiments that promise greatly to improve alfalfa in these respects. He picked out as the plant most likely to fulfill the conditions, the common yellow trefoil, known as black medick (Medicago lupulina L.)

The black medick is looked upon as a weed in the United States and Canada. It grows profusely in meadows, generally almost or quite flat upon the ground. It has slender stems and produces an abundance of fine leaves, which yield good grazing, but not good hay.

In the Journal of Heredity Mr. Southworth reports on the success of his experiments. While alfalfa seeds poorly, its cousin, the black medick, produces an abundance of seeds. Alfalfa seems to need the help of bees in its pollination, while the black medick is generally self fertilized.

Mr. Southworth began in 1911 with mother alfalfa plants obtained from the United States department of agriculture, Washington, but, owing to the hot season, not one of the crosses set seed. In August of that year he picked out an alfalfa plant growing in a discarded grass plot with rich green foliage and an abundance of healthy, vigorous, violet flowers. These flowers he fertilized with pollen from black medick growing as weeds. From these he obtained five healthy pods.

Sowing the seed from these in the fall of 1912, he raised twenty-four plants, nineteen of which he removed to the open field. These were allowed to fertilize themselves, and the plants from their seed were raised in the autumn of 1913 in the greenhouses of the department of plant breeding, Cornell university.

Without going into the details of the growth of each plant the results may be summarized by saying that 72 per cent of the plants grew above the average (5.5 inches) in height and about 78 per cent were not erect in growth.

Mr. Southworth says the cross is difficult to make. He is continuing his experiments and urges others to investigate along the same lines.

He notes also that the difficulty in getting hard alfalfa seeds to germinate may successively be overcome by immersing them for ten minutes in strong commercial sulphuric acid and then washing them free from the acid. This method was invented by Professor H. H. Love of Cornell.

INDOOR GARDEN PLANTS.

With a little care a number of tropical plants may be grown indoors, and during the winter they are a particularly attractive addition to a bay window or conservatory garden. Various kinds of palms, rubber plants, oleanders, aspidistras and cactuses are easily kept in good condition indoors if given the proper attention and not permitted to be exposed to frost.

Palms are much used for interior decorations where there is no direct sunlight. Regular watering is essential, with especial care not to overwater. It is better with most palms to keep them a little dry than too wet. Where a pot is in a jardiniere especial care must be exercised not to have them too wet.

While small wash the foliage occasionally with soapsuds made from a good soap. Immediately follow with a thorough rinsing. When too large for this spray the tops frequently with clear water.

Rubber plants are especially satisfactory to grow where there is a good light without direct sunlight. Water often enough to keep the soil moist, but do not under any circumstances permit water to stand about the roots nor allow it to become "bone dry." A potted plant set in a jardiniere needs especial care not to overwater.

Wash the foliage frequently with soapsuds made from good soap. Rinse thoroughly at once.

Repot occasionally, as the pots become full of roots. Feed once in two to four weeks with dilute nitrate of soda (a heaping teaspoonful dissolved in water) or ammonia water or manure water or some prepared plant food.

Oleanders may be treated more or less as are palms.

Aspidistras are most ornamental. They should be kept rather drier than palms and rubber plants.

Cactuses require rather dry, sandy soil.

Had Already Done So.

Father—Now, Mabel, I'll tell you a young fellow I wish you would grow to like—young Wigley. He'll make a noise in the world just when you least look for it. Mabel—You've got him sized up all right, dad; I heard him eating soup in a restaurant the other day.—London Mail.

Spanish Children's Games.

Our little Spanish cousins play most of the games American children play, but the names are different. They call "pussy wants a corner" "cottage to rent" and say this little rime:

Cottage to rent, try the other side;
You see this one is occupied.

Instead of "blind man's buff" they call the game "blind hen," but it is played the same. They also play "for-felts" and "hide and seek," and all the boys are very fond of playing soldier. They like to make toy swords and guns out of sticks, and then they form in line and march around singing.

Taking Pictures of Leaves.

Take any leaf, old or young, and place it between two pieces of white paper. Have the upper paper a little damp. Over this place a light weight—two or three ordinary sized books will do—and leave it entirely alone for several days. A week is better. At the end of this time remove the weights and see what you have—a marvelous photograph of a leaf and actually made by itself! A wonderful book of leaf prints can be made in this way by any one who will take the necessary pains.

Afternoon Tea For the Dolls.

Milk tea is the most refreshing thing for dolls. Don't put too much sugar in it, though, 'cause that'll give them the willyoomsewoos, which is a terrible thing, and be sure to have animal crackers. Dolls just love animal crackers. You might invite the cat or the dog, if there happens to be one in your family, because the dolls teach them such beautiful manners.

Magic Ink.

Any writing or picture made with a solution of cobalt chloride is invisible until heated strongly for a few seconds, when the written characters or picture appear of a blue color. By simply breathing upon the paper they again disappear from view, to reappear if again heated.

Woman's World

Lady Paget Heading American Women in London Relief Work.

LADY ARTHUR PAGET.

One of the most important London movements for the relief of sufferers through the European war is that headed by prominent American women and known as the American women's war relief fund. It was originated by Lady Arthur Paget, wife of Sir Arthur Paget, whose husband is a Lieutenant general in the British army. Lady Paget is the daughter of the late Mrs. Paran Stevens, a New York society leader, and has been an important figure in British society for many years. She is very wealthy, owning much New York real estate. Her charities are as notable as her splendid social functions. She was a great favorite with the late King Edward and has always been much liked by Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary and other members of the royal family. Besides her husband she has three sons serving in the English army. Noted for her wit, beauty and savoir faire, any philanthropic project that receives her backing is sure to be popular. The first meeting of the war relief fund, which was held in the big London drawing room of Mrs. W. B. Leeds, was attended by such Anglo-American social leaders as the Duchess of Marlborough, Lady Randolph Churchill, Lady Lowther, Mrs. Lewis Vernon Harcourt and many others.

MOYEN AGE EFFECT.

A Youthful Frock Showing the Charming New Line in Dress.

Simplicity in style and cut in combination with the low waist line makes the essential feature of the moyen age idea, and this costume shows it.

The circular tunic flares most gracefully over the narrow two piece skirt, and the two materials are combined most successfully in the body portion.

The materials shown here are gabardine and velvet, but broadcloth would be handsome treated in the same way.

TUNIC DRESS.

The bound edges make an interesting feature, for bindings of silk braid are exceedingly smart this season.

For the sixteen year size the dress will require two and one-half yards of material twenty-seven inches wide, with three yards of velvet forty-four inches wide and ten yards of braid to make as illustrated.

Proper Place.

"Pa, shall I put this book on medieval tortures on the library table?"

"No, son; you had better put it on the rack."—Baltimore American.

Very, Very Different.

"So Jack is engaged, is he? And is Fanny the bride to be?"

"No; she's the tried to be."—Boston Transcript.

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-tives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen 'Fruit-a-tives' advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had."

B. A. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Kidney Remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and skin as well as on the kidneys, and thereby soothes and cures any Kidney soreness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit a tives Limited, Ottawa.

CONCERNING BEES.

If people knew what a great source of profit is found in the keeping of bees and how interesting the work there wouldn't be an unused square foot of ground on any farm in the United States, writes Wesley Forster, Colorado state bee inspector.

Bees are the only producers known to husbandry that yield a profit without cost to feed. They find their own pasture. The multiply so rapidly that they more than pay for the small initial expense of housing them, and the first cost of equipment is almost trifling.

Bee culture may be made profitable by the children of the farm or by the women members of the family. It may be carried on successfully in conjunction with the keeping of poultry or growing of fruit. In the latter case apiculture is found to be a great help toward more fruit and better fruit.

Bees are little trouble and require only occasional attention. They are easily handled and readily controlled. Best of all, they give a real service in hard cash, and that counts most on the farm.

The funeral of the late James R. Smith, who died at Odessa on Jan. 8th, was held on Monday afternoon at Cataract cemetery. The deceased was a member of the Masonic order at Odessa and a large body of the latter turned out to the funeral, some of them acting as pall-bearers. The late Mr. Smith was a merchant of Odessa, and was borne at Westbrooke sixty-one years ago. In religion he was a Methodist and widely known. The remains were conveyed to Cataract cemetery, where they were placed in the vault.

At her home on the Path Road, where she was born eighty-four years ago, Miss Maria L. Fairfield passed away on Saturday the 9th inst. She was the second daughter of the late Hermon Fairfield, and belonged to the fourth generation of the family who have occupied the old Fairfield homestead for a century and a quarter. She possessed a great fund of memories of the past generation, and was acquainted with the history of all the old families in the countryside. Until quite recent years she could still ride a horse, handle a boat, skate, swim, etc., better than many men. She was bright, cheerful and hospitable and took a great interest in current events till the very last. She is survived by two brothers and a number of nephews and nieces.

Mervin Mackie, of Belleville, was arrested at Napanee on Tuesday morning charged with breaking into Hooper's drug store a year ago last Friday. The Chief of Police of Napanee has been following the movements of Mackie since last February, but the prisoner has been in various places in American territory. Last week Chief Graham heard of Mackie at Cobourg and sent a warrant for his arrest, but the Cobourg Police missed him. Constable Barrett was called to the station on Tuesday morning at 3 a.m., by the baggage-man, stating that a couple of men were loitering around the station. Mr. Barrett conducted the men to the Paisley house where they went to bed, at the same time leaving a report for Chief Graham to see the men in the morning. On seeing the men the Chief immediately recognized Mackie and placed him under arrest. Mackie appeared before the Magistrate on Wednesday afternoon and was let out on suspended sentence, after having made restitution for all goods stolen from Mr. Hooper and paid all costs.

The annual meeting of the Napanee Public Library was held as advertised on January 11th, 1915, at 7.30 p.m. The report of the Treasurer was the first order of business. It showed a prosperous year for the library, with a slightly increased membership. The election of members for the Board of Management for 1915 resulted in the election of Messrs. Herrington, Deroche, Checkley, Robinson, Miller, Leonard and Warner. At a meeting of the Board held immediately after the Annual Meeting, the following officers for 1915 were elected:

Sec.-Treasurer—Clarence M. Warner.
Librarian—Miss Lucy Edwards.

Clarence M. Warner,

DEATH ON XMAS DAY.

The announcement of the death of James W. Cassidy at his home in Centreville on Xmas Day was heard with deepest regret by a large circle of friends. The deceased had been in failing health for more than a year, and during that time his sufferings were intense, but he bore them with Christian fortitude. Although he had the best medical aid and most tender nursing that his family could devise, he gradually sank. He was a young man, but twenty-five years of age, of exemplary character and refinement, and much beloved by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. As a student of Newburgh High School his progress was rapid and he was a favorite with teachers and companions alike. He is survived by his father, mother, one brother, Frank, and two sisters, Eva and Irene, to whom the greatest sympathy is extended. He was a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church at Centreville. The love and respect in which he was held by the community was shown by the large concourse of friends and neighbours assembled to assist at a solemn Mass of Requiem sung over his remains by Rev. Father O'Farrell, on Dec. 28th, 1914.
